

Richard Davies is an eminent economist and author, renowned for his insightful analysis of the global economy and his contributions to public understanding of economic principles. As the new Director of the Growth Co-Lab at LSE, Richard leads this innovative research collaboration between LSE and Harvard University's Growth Lab, focusing on advising governments on inclusive growth practices.

TOPICS:

- Why Banks Fail
- Monetary Policy
- Financial Crime
- Reforming Economics
- The Rise of Microeconomics
- Extreme Economies

LANGUAGES:

He presents in English.

PUBLICATIONS:

- 2020 Extreme Economies
- 2015 Economics: Making Sense of the Modern Economy

IN DETAIL:

Richard previously taught at the prestigious University of Chicago and led the Economics for Everyone initiative, making economic education more accessible to the general public. Founder of the Economics Observatory, Richard has significantly advanced public engagement and understanding of economic issues. His career also includes influential roles such as Chair of the Council of Economic Advisers at HM Treasury, economist and speechwriter at the Bank of England, and economics editor at The Economist. Richard's research focuses on using micro data to address macroeconomic puzzles, with particular interest in inflation, productivity, and trade.

WHAT HE OFFERS YOU:

Richard provides a comprehensive understanding of the global economy, enriched by his extensive experience in academia, policy, and journalism. He offers audiences a unique perspective on the evolving role of economics, grounded in practical examples and cutting-edge research.

HOW HE PRESENTS:

His presentations blend deep knowledge with narrative storytelling, first-hand experiences, and humour, making him a compelling and accessible speaker for diverse audiences.