

Simon Brodkin AKA Lee Nelson

Stand-Up Comedian

"One of the most exciting comedians to see live."

Simon Brodkin, also known by his stage persona Lee Nelson, is a celebrated comedian, writer, and master of the art of pranking. With a unique blend of sharp wit, social commentary, and daring stunts, Simon has become one of the most recognizable figures in British comedy.

TOPICS:

- One Man Comedy Club
- The Art of Comedy: From Stand-Up to Satire
- Behind the Pranks: Stories and Insights
- Life as Lee Nelson: Creating and Sustaining a Comedy Persona
- Entertainment
- Awards

LANGUAGES:

He presents in English.

IN DETAIL:

Along with many other much-loved characters, Simon is the creator of "comedy legend" (The Sun) Lee Nelson and preening Premier League footballer Jason Bent, writing and starring in three series of BBC Three's Lee Nelson's Well Good Show & Well Funny People. His ability to entertain and provoke thought through humour and audacious pranks has earned him a dedicated following and widespread acclaim. Simon has been featured on popular shows like "Live at the Apollo," "The John Bishop Show," and "Sunday Night at the Palladium." He has been named one of The Sun's "Top Ten Funniest Comedians" and has garnered praise from critics and fans alike for his bold and innovative approach to comedy.

WHAT HE OFFERS YOU:

Simon offers a style of humour that is extremely entertaining and at the same time being spontaneous and quick witted. The irrepressible South London lad hosts events full of unmissable entertainment.

HOW HE PRESENTS:

Simon's performances are highly original, with hilariously funny material, based on topical issues and cynical observations that leave audiences entertained and inspired.